If you've been injured at work, we can help you with your claim

If you have been injured at work or suffered a work-related illness, you will be entitled to workers' compensation to cover medical expenses, loss of income, rehabilitation services, and access other benefits under the workers' compensation scheme.

Your injuries may have happened in a variety of settings such as on a building site or in an office. These may include broken bones, electrocution, burns, back injuries, strain injuries, psychological injuries (such as anxiety, depression, or PTSD), catastrophic injuries like partial or full paraplegia, or any injury you have sustained travelling to and from work or during the course of your work.

Our expert team of workers' compensation lawyers will guide you through the claim process, helping you understand your rights and obtain your full entitlements.

When you call us, you will speak directly with the senior lawyer or partner handling your case. You will be given their direct line so that you can speak with them at any time.

We genuinely care about you and want to help you get back on the road to recovery.

Common workplace injuries

- On-site workplace injury
- Office workplace injury
- Fall or machinery-related injury
- Journey claim
- Electrocution or burn injury
- Mental Health injuries
- Wrongful death

A work injury does not have to be a physical one. It can also be stress-related such as a heart attack, stroke, or worsening of a pre-existing disease or condition.

You need to act quickly

If you've been injured or have fallen ill at work, you need to report it to your employer's workers' compensation insurer within 6 months of your injury.

If it's been more than 6 months since you became aware of your injury, you still may have options. Call accident legal today and speak with one of our experienced workers' compensation lawyers for a free, no-obligation case review

Your entitlements

Under the workers' compensation scheme, you may be entitled to the following benefits:

- Weekly payments to cover lost income
- Medical, hospital, and nursing expenses
- Rehabilitation and other support services
- Paid or voluntary care
- Payments for your pain and suffering
- A lump sum payment if you've been seriously and permanently injured.

Our workers' compensation lawyers can help you

Whether you've just been receiving your entitlements for some time, we can help you with legal advice customised to your situation.

We can also help you assess whether you may be entitled to additional disability benefits or a lump sum payment through the insurance policies included in your superannuation.

Am I eligible for workers' compensation?

You are covered by the workers' compensation scheme if you are a:

- Casual or permanent employee
- Full-time or part-time employee

No win, no fee

We understand that you've got enough on your plate without worrying about finding money for legal fees. We take care of all of that for you with our no win, no fee guarantee.

The accident legal no disbursement loan promise

Many other personal injury law firms will require you to enter into a disbursement loan agreement with a financier to fund expenses in your matter, such as medical records, medical reports and barrister's fees. These financiers charge very high interest rates on these disbursement loans and never tell you the exact dollar amount of interest they will charge until you have settled or are about to settle your matter. With the accident legal no disbursement loan promise:

- we will never ask you to sign a disbursement loan at any time
- we pay every single disbursement on your behalf upfront
- we recoup expenses from the settlement funds when the insurer pays
- you are never required to pay anything until your claim is finalised
- we don't charge you any interest on the disbursements we pay on your behalf. That's right, no interest, absolutely nothing.

In most matters, the interest charged by financiers on disbursement loans adds up to thousands of dollars. The accident legal no disbursement loan promise ensures more money from your settlement goes to you rather than a financier.

FAQs

What is the workers' compensation claim process in Queensland?

The circumstances of each work incident which results in an injury or illness are different, and the workers' compensation legal process can be complicated. After contacting accident legal for a free, no-obligation case review, our expert workers' compensation lawyers will be able to discuss your claim and give you an idea of the timing, process and information required from you to move your claim forward.

How long will my claim take?

This will depend on the severity of your injuries and/or illness and the complexity of your claim. As a general rule, most claims take between 12 months and 3 years to complete. After your claim has been completed, there is often an initial delay while your injuries stabilise. Your injuries need to have stabilised before you are medically examined to assess the full extent of your injuries. We will progress your claim as quickly as possible. However, we won't rush your claim as this could result in your compensation being significantly less than what you are entitled to.

Are there time limits that apply to bringing a claim?

Yes. Strict timelines apply. But even if the timeframe has expired, you still may have avenues to pursue a claim.

We recommend that you seek legal advice as soon as you can to make sure you receive the full compensation for your injury or illness. Please contact our team of workers' compensation lawyers to find out more about your entitlements and eligibility to make a claim.

What can I claim for?

You are entitled to claim compensation for the following:

- The pain and suffering you have experienced
- Your past and future loss of income
- Your past and future loss of superannuation
- Your past and future out-of-pocket expenses (i.e., medical expenses, travel expenses, rehabilitation expenses)
- Your past and future paid care or services (i.e., cleaning, gardening, personal care needs, etc.) that you had to pay someone to do as a result of your injuries.

Do I need to pay a fee?

You don't pay us a cent unless we win your case and you are paid compensation.
